Dear Traveler,

In 1967 I first set foot in Galápagos. I heard the island way before landing—a cacophony of sound unknown to my young ears—a kind of barking, twittering, and squawking all mixed together. As we approached the island, there was a palpable sense of excitement from all in our dingy. What was this place? What was making all that noise?

I never forgot that noise—likened to a nursery where all the babies awake at once, hungry and excited about life.

The impressions made in the next hours are seared into my memory as indelibly as anything I've experienced in life. And they bring a very large smile to my face every time I recall that day. And, if I thought too much about all of the subsequent visits and the reaction of my own kids, I'd be doing nothing but smiling.

Galápagos is, without doubt, the most remarkable island archipelago on the planet, unique for so many reasons. But, of course, you already know that. All of the great natural history film makers, authors, narrators have made their pilgrimages there. And despite all their efforts, Galápagos is never ‘done’; Galápagos is never passé; Galápagos is eternally fascinating.

Since 1967 when my father, the first person to bring layman expeditions there, we have been dedicated to bringing people here—to see, think and smile. And, in the ensuing years, we, as the creatures of Galápagos, have evolved as well.

And so, as you will see in the pages that follow, we do believe we are different than so many others seeking your attention. The reasons are rooted in two key areas—our understanding of this complex and wondrous place and our understanding of and respect for your different aspirations while being there.

I hope we will have the pleasure and the honor of sharing with you the magic that is Galápagos.

All the best,

Sven-Olof Lindblad

PS. On the cover, a photo of one of our guests—Jordan. She recently wrote “my favorite experience was with the sea lions because if you got in the water they would come over and play with you.”
“... hard to comprehend until you experience it for yourself... being eye-to-eye with waved albatross and Nazca boobies soaring along a cliff, sharing a moment with Sally Lightfoot crabs that don’t run away, encountering blue-footed boobies nesting along the trail, and Galápagos sea lions calmly lounging on a white-sand beach. Imagine being eight years old and face-to-face with a blue-footed booby? Or swimming with sea lions, penguins and marine iguanas? These are experiences that can transform lives.”

—RALPH HOPKINS, NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC PHOTOGRAPHER AFTER HIS RECENT VISIT

“A little world within itself,” Darwin called it, an archipelago like no other on earth, with strange, wonderful, endemic creatures.

The encounters with wild animals that happen in Galápagos don’t happen anywhere else on earth, because there is simply no fear here. This is a marvelous thing to experience, this transfigured relationship with animals; it lifts the human spirit. And the magic works whether you’re 8 or 80.

EACH GALÁPAGOS ISLAND IS DIFFERENT

Called “Las Encantadas” by the Spaniards who discovered and feared them, these mysterious islands famously inspired the young Darwin, the author Herman Melville and countless other visitors. Explore the different landscapes, from lunar to lush, with our dedicated expedition team. They will reveal each island’s different highlights for you, to make your expedition more engaging and more meaningful than any other form of travel.

“I have snorkeled throughout the Caribbean and Hawaii with their colorful fish. This is a much different experience. Day one we snorkeled up close and personal with sea lions and the flightless cormorant. Day two with sea turtles and penguins. Day three with schools of fish and sting rays. Day four with marine iguanas. Day five with sharks!!!”

Snorkel throughout your expedition. Or, if certified, arrange for special scuba diving opportunities.

Prefer to relax in the lounge and see Galápagos’s wonderful marine life? Easy—our ships are the only ones in Galápagos with an onboard undersea specialist who dives with a video camera, so you can stay dry and see it all.

Venture even deeper—National Geographic Endeavour has an onboard ROV, capable of depths up to 1000 feet. It lets our guests see parts of the Galápagos Marine Reserve that few scientists or researchers have ever explored. The ROV shoots film that is shared with guests aboard both our ships. Additionally, data we collect supports scientific research projects jointly managed by the Charles Darwin Research Station and Galápagos National Park. We’re thrilled to be able to contribute to the scientific understanding of this unique part of the world.

“Galápagos is a place worthy of our respect and care. It will inspire all who come and we are committed to ensuring that our guests have the most valuable experience possible.” — SVEN LINDBLAD, FOUNDER AND GALÁPAJOS EXPLORER SINCE 1968
It is a privilege, a true luxury, to be in Galápagos, a world treasure that has required the efforts of a dedicated community, including our company as you’ll see on the next page, to restore and protect it. This awareness of privilege is the prime mover for our expedition team. It fills them with a contagious joy, fostering a rewarding esprit de corps among all onboard. It motivates them to share it with you— the sea, the islands, the wildlife—by providing the richest, most in-depth experience. And our staff-to-guest ratio, the most generous in the islands, and our uniquely equipped expedition ships are key to that, as you’ll see on pages 22 to 25.

“I believe in creating new possibilities for human experience and understanding.”
—LARS-ERIC LINDBLAD, PASSPORT TO ANYWHERE

Now regarded as the father of ecotourism, Lars-Eric Lindblad was literally the first travel company owner to take travelers where only scientists had gone. In 1967 he led the first ‘citizen explorer’ expedition to Galápagos. We have remained committed to Galápagos ever since.

We are the only U.S. company with two ships, owned and operated by us, based in Galápagos year-round.

No other travel company has our 40+ years of experience here, or the profound connection to Galápagos, that we do. And our experience greatly adds to the quality of yours.

In addition, we have invited our guests to join us in far reaching conservation efforts—raising $5.8 million since 1997 for invasive species eradication, education and scientific initiatives. Currently, we raise money through the LEX-NG Fund for Galápagos that contributes 100% of the donations received. The LEX-NG Fund is well-respected, and foundations such as the Helmsley Charitable Trust have joined us, providing large grants to tackle the biggest challenges facing the archipelago.

EXCERPT FROM THE SYMPOSIUM REPORT:

On 23 September 1968 two young forestry officials, Juan Black and José Villa, arrived at Santa Cruz aboard a navy ship, [accompanied by] Sir Thomas Barlow, a great-grandson of Charles Darwin and the new Secretary-General of the [Charles Darwin] Foundation, who was making his first official visit to Galápagos. At the station it was soon revealed that Black and Villa had no equipment, no funds, no department, and little idea even of the tasks that lay before them. But the two men were keen and perceptive, and they brought with them the inestimable advantages of having government appointments. They were provided with board and lodging at the [Charles Darwin Research] station, while the late Lars-Eric Lindblad, whose tourist cruises were just then becoming a part of the Galápagos scene, found the money to pay their salaries for the first year. Gradually, these two took over the crucial duties and became, in effect, the nucleus of Ecuador’s future National Park Service.”
From left to right: Our relationship with the Charles Darwin Research Station is long-standing; together with the Helmsley Foundation we support the Tomas De Berlanga School on Santa Cruz island; the LEX-NG Artisan Fund supports artisans committed to turning Galápagos trash into treasure.

INSPIRING THE WORLD THROUGH EXPEDITION TRAVEL

In 2004, Lindblad Expeditions and National Geographic joined forces, creating an advantage for our guests—the opportunity to explore with people whose work you've seen in the pages of National Geographic magazines, including top National Geographic photographers, like the three shown at right.

AN EXPEDITION TEAM THAT MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

All guides working in Galápagos must be Galápagos residents, and the naturalists on our staff are no exception. The difference, however, is that they are each exceptional, hand-picked for their knowledge and Lindblad Expeditions-trained to genuinely enhance your experience. And clearly they do: we’ve received thousands of comment cards over the course of 40+ years in the expedition business consistently expressing the same sentiment: “Outstanding expedition staff.”

The healthy diversity of specialties—marine biology, evolutionary biology, ornithology, and more—and personalities on our team means you can gravitate to the naturalists whose interests and personalities most appeal to you on any given day for any given activity. You are never directed into groups or assigned. And our generous staff-to-guest ratio (12 to 1 on the yacht-scaled National Geographic Islander; 12 to 1 on the larger National Geographic Endeavour) means you have plenty of choices every day.

DAYS 11-18: PACAYA-SAMIRIA NATIONAL RESERVE
Spend this week exploring the Pacaya-Samiria National Reserve, a pristine swath of jungle—one of the largest in South America—stretching more than five million acres, and harboring some of the Amazon’s most fascinating flora and fauna. Bordered by the Marañón and the Ucayali, two powerful rivers that converge to create the famed Amazon, the reserve floods annually with nutrient-rich waters and is known locally as the Mirrored Forest for the reflections created by its glassy water.

Set out into this remarkable wilderness on daily excursions by skiff, kayak, and, when the water level permits, hikes on terra firma. Skim past giant lily pads afloat on black-water lakes, and venture deep into the rain forest on narrow tributaries. Spot sloths and monkeys, including variably colored saddleback tamarins, noisy howlers, and shaggy-tailed monk saki monkeys. Watch for an astounding variety of birds, from tanagers and hummingbirds to parrots and endangered scarlet macaws. In the river, look for massive paiche fish, the Amazon’s largest; rare pink dolphins; and the infamous piranhas.

Enjoy an opportunity to swim in a lake in the reserve’s interior. Seek out Victoria amazonica, a giant water lily that grows in small lagoons. Go on a bird-watching hike, listening for the vocal oropendola and then looking for its telltale yellow tail. Watch the sun set and listen to a cacophonous symphony of nocturnal animals calling out across the treetops. Then slip through the forest in a skiff as night falls, using a spotlight to find caimans, frogs, fishing bats and other creatures of the night.

Pay a visit to one of the communities on the reserve’s edge and get to know the ribereños, those who live on the riverbanks, and their age-old traditions. Meet local women and children, and watch them make jewelry and other handicrafts. Learn how local subsistence farmers cultivate wild plants and trees to earn income. Hear about how the locals find edible fruits and indigenous plants with medicinal properties hidden in the jungle. (B,L,D DAILY)
