thing, setting foot? That's the exhilaration of discovery.

EXPLORE ONE OF THE PLANET'S
REMOTEST PLACES AND EXPERIENCE FAR-FLUNG
ECOSYSTEMS—EFFORTLESSLY

FOR MANY TRAVELERS, THE DESIRE TO VISIT PATAGONIA WAS SPARKED by reading Bruce Chatwin. Published in 1977, his In Patagonia was hailed as a masterpiece, revolutionizing the travel genre and making its author famous overnight. It certainly provided our expedition teams with lasting inspiration. We have explored Patagonia often over the decades. However, in 2017/18, we committed our passion and purpose, dedicating National Geographic Explorer and National Geographic Orion to full expedition seasons each year.

There are many reasons to explore Patagonia, and numerous hurdles to doing so. In Chatwin's time and long after, backpacking and car or bus travel were the only real means to cover great distances. Despite the recent surge of interest in Patagonia and an increase in air travel, getting from Point A to Point B has not improved dramatically, since many Patagonia flights route back up to Santiago and Buenos Aires before connecting back down to Patagonia.

Our four expeditions featured here provide ideal solutions. Not only will you be able to easily and enjoyably traverse great Patagonian distances to experience the astounding diversity, you will also enjoy access to places and opportunities you'd otherwise miss—in the company of our expert team, who will do whatever it takes to ensure you the consummate Patagonia experience.

“On no previous journey am I conscious of having done more. Patagonia is as I expected but more so... Physically it is magnificent... in the east you confront the great wall of the cordillera with bright turquoise lakes (some are milky white and others a pale jade green) with unbelievable colours to the rocks. Sometimes it seems that the Almighty has been playing at making Neapolitan ice cream... alternatively striped vanilla, strawberry and pistachio in bands of 100 feet or more. Imagine an upland lake where the rock face on one side is bright purple, the other bright green, with cracked orange mud and a white rim.”

— BRUCE CHATWIN,
Letter to his wife, Elizabeth

BE AMONG THE FIRST TO EXPERIENCE CHILE'S EPIC NEW ROUTE OF THE PARKS

UNTIL RECENTLY, TORRES DEL PAINE NATIONAL PARK WAS the dominant scenic destination in Chilean Patagonia. But the opening of Chile's La Ruta de los Parques (Route of the Parks) in late 2018 has vastly increased the supply of wonders. In March 2017, Kris Tompkins, on behalf of Tompkins Conservation and her late husband, Douglas Tompkins, made the largest donation of privately held land in the world—donating one million acres to the Chilean government, who matched it with an additional nine million acres of federal land. Overnight Patagonia became home to 85 percent of the country's protected lands. Expedition naturalist Eduardo Shaw describes the opportunity this creates for our voyages:

“Patagonia has been my home for almost 30 years. Now, thanks to the tireless work of Kris and the late Douglas Tompkins, Patagonia is enjoying a great moment. Today it is possible to travel over 1700 miles from Puerto Montt to Cape Horn and over that distance pass through 17 National Parks and the more than 60 communities that stand to benefit from an increase in tourism. Also thanks to Kris, we’ve enjoyed special access to Pumalín-Douglas Tompkins National Park; and have long explored the breathtaking Torres del Paine National Park. Now we will travel through Bernardo O’Higgins and Kawésqar National Parks to experience splendid southern Andean beech forests. Navigating the maze of channels and fjords between the Straits of Magellan and Beagle Channel, we will travel into Karukinka, a private reserve, and Alberto De Agostini National Park, and if we’re lucky, a view of the elusive Mount Sarmiento. We hope the finale of our voyage will be a landing at southernmost park on the route: Cape Horn National Park. We all must pray for good weather!”

BREAKING NEWS: KRIS TOMPKINS ABOARD!

We are delighted to announce that Kris Tompkins will join the Oct. 8, 2020 departure of Epic Patagonia as a special guest speaker. She will be sharing the adventure with guests October 8-18, from Puerto Montt to Puerto Natales.

ENJOY EXTRAORDINARY CULTURAL EXPERIENCES

THE CULTURAL HISTORY OF PATAGONIA IS fascinating, and we encounter elements of it on all our voyages, including the culture and long history of the indigenous people of the region, as well as the vibrant huaso (gaucho in Argentina) culture. However, Epic Patagonia offers a rare opportunity to steep in the unique culture of Chiloé Island on an in-depth visit. Chile's second largest island—Tierra del Fuego is the largest—Chiloé has a layered history featuring ancient indigenous people, who impressed the Spanish conquistadores with their exceptional canoe dexterity; French whalers; and settlement by Europeans and the introduction of farming. The island also has a diversity of marine fauna, including humpback whales, Peale's dolphins, sea lions, marine otters, plus, Magellanic penguins. What makes Chiloé remarkable, making it a magnet for our time and curiosity, is its vernacular architecture—specifically, its incomparable, beautiful wooden churches, designated UNESCO World Heritage status.

A TRADITIONAL CURANTO EXPERIENCE

Archaeologists have found a number of ancient middens along Chiloé's coast, testifying that the early inhabitants were nomads who hunted, fished, and collected clams and mussels—the essential ingredients of the enduring curanto tradition. A curanto is prepared by digging a one and a half-yard hole in the ground, covering the bottom with logs and stones, and lighting a bonfire on top to bring the stones to red-hot. Traditional ingredients—shellfish, certain types of fish, meat, potatoes, chapaleles (potato dumplings) and vegetables—are layered over the stones. Each layer is covered with fig or white cabbage leaves. The “oven” is then covered with wet sacks, earth and grass chunks—creating a giant pressure cooker. In approximately one hour, it's done. Our authentic curanto lunch (on the Epic Patagonia itinerary only) will be delicious and highly memorable—for the setting as well as the appetizing flavors and textures.

THE CHURCHES OF CHILOÉ ISLAND

Enduring structures made of wood are wonderful to encounter in any context, and Chiloé's native timber churches are outstanding, unique in a South American architectural tradition dominated by Spanish colonial architecture. They represent a tradition, initiated by the Jesuit Peripatetic Mission in the 17th and 18th centuries, and continued and enriched by the Franciscans during the 19th century. More importantly, they originated through a fusion of Spanish (Jesuit) culture and the local population's skills and traditions. Chiloé is a place beloved by the Chileans and it is a privilege to experience it. A rewarding learning opportunity, exploring Chiloé is also a chance to benefit from our National Geographic photographer's expertise—to capture truly unique and beautiful subjects, and document a memory-bank worthy part of your expedition.

PRIVILEGED ACCESS TO THE ISLAND AT THE END OF THE WORLD

ISLA DE LOS ESTADOS, ALSO KNOWN AS STATEN ISLAND, HAS been so seldom seen that it holds a near-mythic place in the region's collective consciousness. In 2015, ours was the first outside expedition ship granted the privilege to travel here since it was essentially closed off to tourism decades ago. Since 2012, members of our expedition staff have worked with authorities to develop guidelines for responsible tourism. Now, you can enjoy an island of exceptional interest with extraordinary wildlife. Blue-eyed shags nesting in the tussock grass. Magellanic penguins heading down to the sea to feed. South American fur seals basking on the rocky shoreline, and in the crystal clear waters, South American sea lions swirling through the beautiful kelp beds.

We are proud to have helped to pave the way for sustainable eco-tourism to the island. All of our voyages call at Staten Island, so no matter which you choose, you'll have the unique opportunity to discover it. Hike through the last stands of forest before the Andes disappear into the Atlantic Ocean, to a knoll overlooking the placid bay where 'the lighthouse at the end of the world' stands, the inspiration for Jules Verne's adventure novel of the same name. (Perhaps you'll join fellow guests reading it on location!) See the evidence of natural forces that impressed Verne. And experience the moving sense of being in sovereign nature.

THE PERFECT PLATFORMS FOR EXPLORING PATAGONIA

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC EXPLORER, NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC ORION, and National Geographic Endurance are all equipped for exploring a region that boasts scenic fjords, monumental glaciers, granite spires, rolling pampas, forests, a beckoning island—and little infrastructure of docks or piers. We'll revel in our remoteness, using the ships' fleet of Zodiacs to land on a Staten Island beach. Or deploying the fleet of kayaks to experience the calm beauties of a Chilean fjord. The onboard ROV, guided by our undersea specialist, might discover something even few scientists have seen. And when we're at sea heading to a new destination, each ship is designed to keep you connected to the stunning scenery outside—with expansive decks, acres of glass windows, a warm and welcoming Bridge, plus an observation lounge, library and main lounge conducive to seeing all there is to see and do, including informative talks and presentations. Each ship's galley team is dedicated to keeping your appetite for adventure kindled and sated. And the onboard amenities contrast nicely with the vagaries of Patagonia weather. Cossetting cabins and suites, with our signature feather duvets, offer the perfect ending to active expedition days.

“To the extent our company has a mantra, it's the ‘tonic of wildness.’ We believe, as Henry David Thoreau did, in the healing power of wild places for the human spirit.”

You'll explore under the expert guidance of a veteran expedition leader, naturalists, a certified photo instructor, and a National Geographic photographer, plus an undersea specialist, wellness specialist, and video chronicler. And our generous expedition staff-to-guest ratio means you can gravitate to the naturalists whose personalities and interests match yours. They'll help you to see, do, and absorb all the extraordinary experiences—in comfort, with inspiration, great conversations, and excellent dining included.

“The tall snow-capped mountains were beautifully lit by the morning sun, and the vast openness of remote Karukinka made one feel small and humbled. As we cruised to shore in our Zodiacs, our naturalist staff spotted the largest existing pinniped, the southern elephant seal. We saw around 100 Andean condors circling and feeding on a dead elephant seal—a rare thing to see! We walked over driftwood, through meadows, and into the fungi-heavy forest. Guests feeling extra adventurous trekked to a scenic waterfall. It was a wonderful introduction to the southern Chilean ecosystem.”

Karukinka Park, 2018

A photograph of a person with curly hair, wearing a dark blue jacket, standing on the wooden railing of a ship's deck. They are holding binoculars to their eyes, looking out over a vast, icy landscape. In the background, a massive glacier flows down a snow-covered mountain into a body of water. The sky is bright blue with scattered white clouds. On the ship's railing, there is a red life preserver with the word 'GEOGRAPHIC' visible, and a yellow buoy is attached to the railing. The overall scene is one of a scenic expedition or travel.

A MOST EXCEPTIONAL BOOK CLUB

Jules Verne is world famous for his monster classics, Around the World in Eighty Days and Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea. But he's at his storytelling best in The Lighthouse at the End of the World, an adventure story set off the extreme tip of South America—right on Staten Island—and inspired by its actual lighthouse, San Juan del Salvamento. What better opportunity to savor this classic tale than to discuss it—in anticipation, and on location? Guests on Epic Patagonia (10/8/20) can participate in advance on our virtual Facebook Book Club, where we'll post discussion points and intriguing questions about this work, and in person, while taking in the real-life setting of his wild and remote scenes. You'll receive a complimentary copy and Facebook invitation link prior to departure. Happy reading!
