2023-2025 VOYAGES

NEW! SUITE EXCLUSIVES

Enjoy new perks and amenities when you book a suite for your Galápagos adventure.

A person wearing a red long-sleeved shirt, patterned leggings, and a wide-brimmed hat stands on dark, jagged volcanic rocks. They are holding a camera up to their eye, taking a photograph. The background features a vibrant turquoise ocean meeting a clear blue sky with scattered white clouds. To the left, a steep, dry, brownish hill rises from the shore. In the foreground, a bright orange crab is visible on the dark rocks.

Few wildernesses are more iconic than Galápagos—the lava-sculpted realm that Charles Darwin once called “a little world within itself.” The archipelago’s pristine seas and shores still look much as they did when the legendary naturalist arrived nearly 200 years ago. Sea lions loll about, welcoming visitors with their convivial, barking chorus. Wized marine iguanas sunbathe on volcanic rocks. Giant tortoises roam through misty meadows.

Discover these wild wonders and much more with Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic, exploring on an immersive adventure that has been refined over decades of voyaging to these magical isles.

Experience Authentic and Immersive Exploration

Perfectly Appointed Expedition Ships

We sail two expedition ships in the Galápagos year-round. The purpose-built, 52-cabin National Geographic Endeavour II exemplifies the style of travel we've refined throughout decades of exploration here. She has expansive decks and exploration tools that allow guests to continue exploring while on board.

The new National Geographic Islander II features 26 spacious staterooms and suites and indoor-outdoor living spaces. Special amenities, like a spacious well-equipped marina and a science hub, take your Galápagos exploration experience to a new level.

A Veteran Team

Every member of our team—from our naturalists and photographers to our expedition leaders—is committed to ensuring you have an unforgettable experience. Many of our veteran guides are Galapagueños; in addition to sharing their extensive knowledge of island species and habitats, they also offer an authentic connection to the region's culture. Exploring in small groups, you will have the opportunity to hear different perspectives every day, and because there are no group assignments, you can gravitate toward naturalists who share your interests.

ALL IN: Activities and excursions are always included in the voyage price, unless otherwise noted.

with Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic

Actively Explore Every Day

Our Galápagos itineraries feature activities for every skill level, with each excursion designed to immerse you in the Enchanted Isles. Snorkel or scuba dive* with acrobatic sea lions, go on a photo walk to capture up-close images of blue-footed boobies, or take a ride in a glass-bottom boat—you can explore your way, every day.

In-Depth Undersea Program

Our extensive undersea program reveals the wonders hidden beneath Galápagos waves. Each voyage features an undersea specialist who documents the marine environment, gathering footage for daily recaps in the lounge so that all guests can glimpse the fascinating sea creatures and their oceanic habitats.

Commitment to Conservation and Community

Sustainability is at the heart of the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic mission, and you can travel with peace of mind, knowing every voyage we sail here gives back to Galápagos.

Together with our guests, we have donated more than $10 million to the conservation of Galápagos habitats and communities.

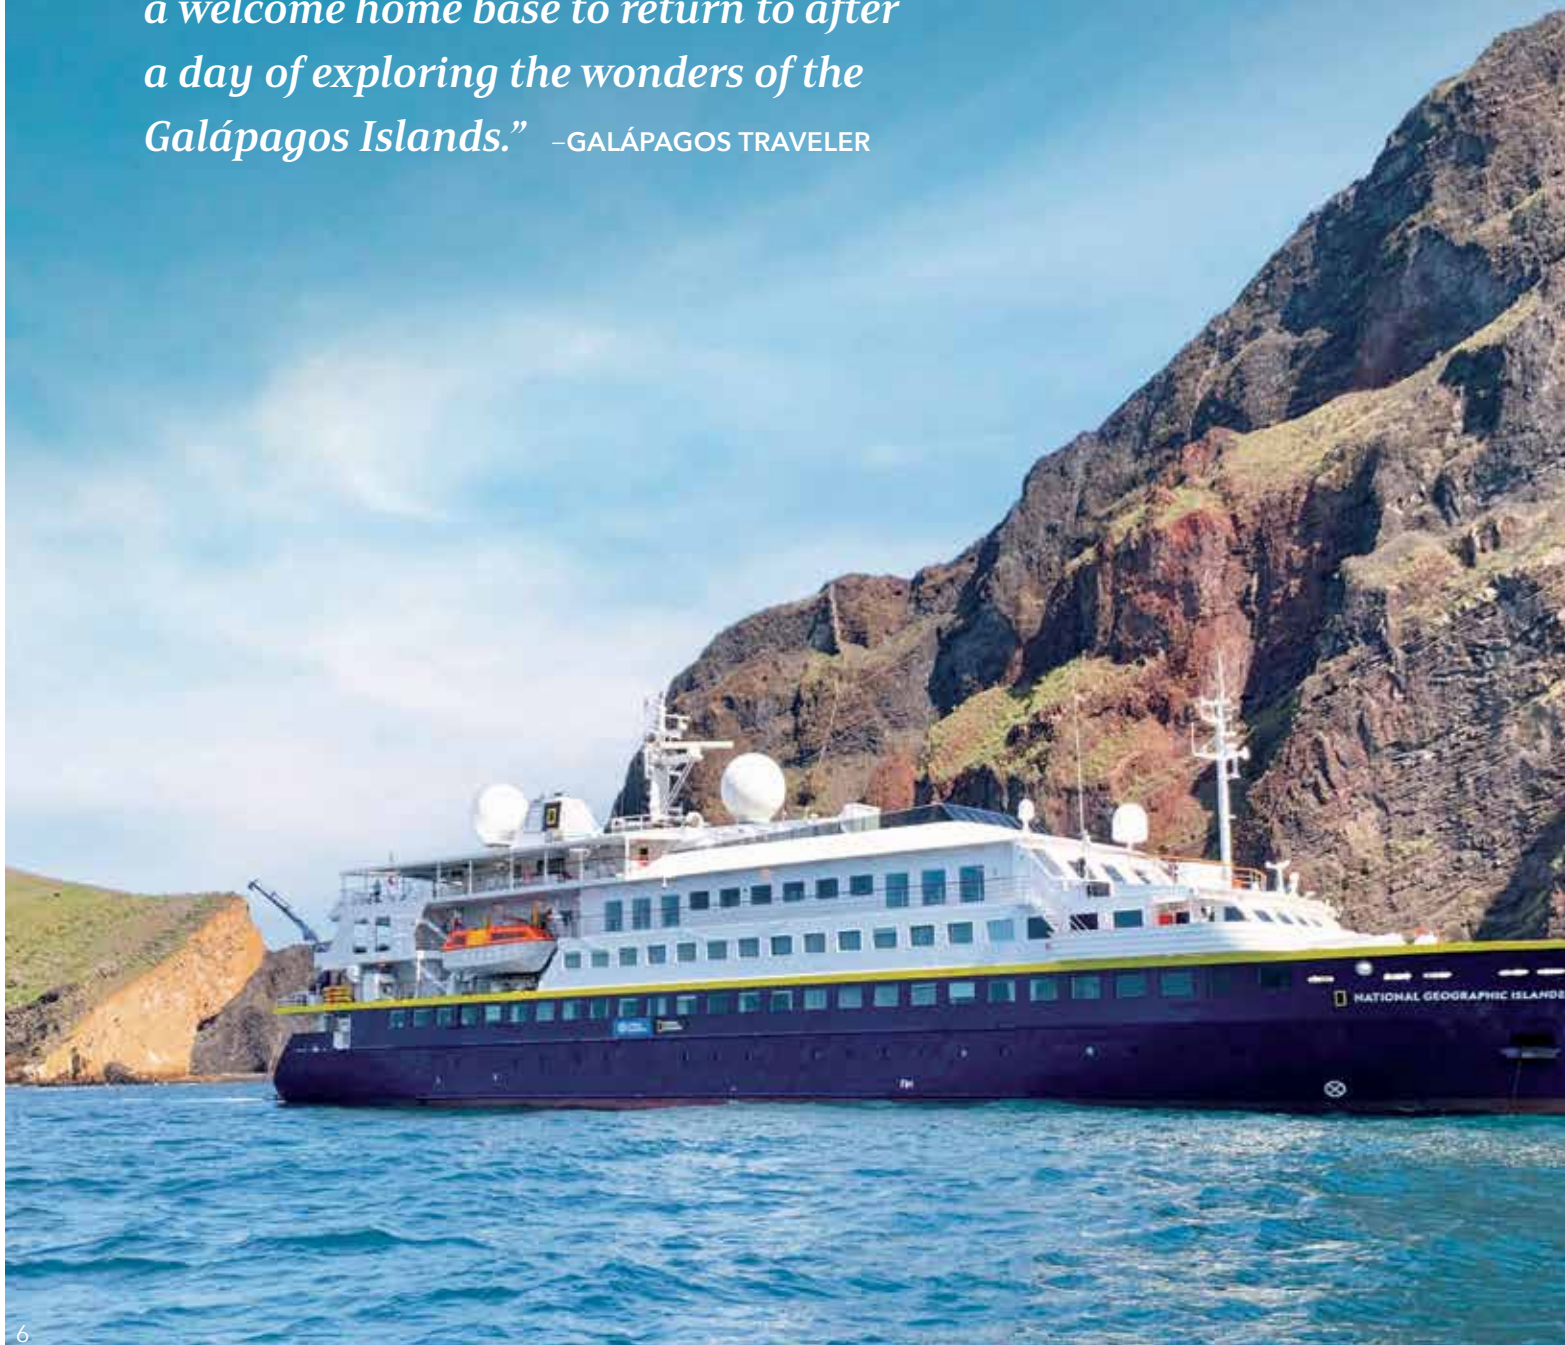

Sustainable practices are also embedded in our operations so that every aspect of your experience reflects this unique part of the planet—from the food served on board, to special excursions to island farms and schools, and the perspectives shared by the local researchers and community leaders who join us along the way.

Scuba diving is available for experienced divers on select departures and at an additional cost. Diving excursions are run by a local operator.*

Now Sailing The New National Geographic Islander II

“It’s the kind of expedition ship that exudes both class and intimacy at the same time; a welcome home base to return to after a day of exploring the wonders of the Galápagos Islands.” –GALÁPAGOS TRAVELER

The newest vessel to join our Galápagos fleet, National Geographic Islander II is a world-class expedition ship with the spirit and soul of a private yacht. Like National Geographic Endeavor II, she is equipped for in-depth exploration above and beneath the waves, with kayaks and stand-up paddleboards, a fleet of Zodiacs, and a custom-designed glass-bottom boat. Travelers can change in and out of their gear in the comfort of the spacious marina, stocked with dedicated snorkeling equipment for each guest.

National Geographic Islander II lends itself beautifully to indoor-outdoor living—from the open-air observation deck to the encircling teak promenade deck and ample spaces that accommodate al fresco dining. Take in your marine surroundings as you unwind in the top-deck plunge pool, glass-walled fitness center, or soothing sauna. Or read up on Charles Darwin and other Galápagos luminaries in the ship library before heading to the Cove lounge for nightly recaps highlighting the day's discoveries.

The 26 spacious staterooms and outsized suites on National Geographic Islander II are welcome sanctuaries after adventure-filled days. Each accommodation has a seating area and ample storage space, and the four Islander Suites feature dedicated living spaces—with couches, dining tables, and chairs—as well as walk-in closets. These suites also offer larger marble bathrooms and bathtubs in addition to the rainwater showers available in every accommodation.

Life on Board

Whether you sail Galápagos aboard National Geographic Endeavour II or National Geographic Islander II, your home base in the archipelago is a destination in its own right, featuring superior amenities to ensure that your time on board is equally rewarding as your time on shore.

Suite Exclusives

The suites on our ships are your elegant retreat at sea, featuring spacious living areas and incredible ocean views. Now, booking one of these beautifully appointed accommodations comes with even more benefits. Our new Suite Exclusives package gives guests staying in eligible cabins access to an array of amenities designed to enhance your on-board experience, including priority booking for spa treatments, complimentary laundry, and other exclusive perks.

Savor the Flavors of Ecuador

Sampling local cuisine is a highlight of any voyage, and we take great care to bring the flavors of the archipelago to every meal. Our menus in the Galápagos were designed in partnership with Ecuadorian chefs to reflect the culinary traditions of the region, and they feature a range of options to satisfy the diverse preferences of our guests, from fresh, plant-based meals to cocktails and zero-proof beverages crafted using local ingredients.

Indulge in Our Wellness Program

Greet the day on deck with a sunrise stretch session or unwind in the spa with a massage, serenaded by the sound of soothing waves. Our dedicated wellness spaces—including treatment rooms, fitness centers, and more—encourage travelers to tap into the natural rhythms of the archipelago. Tailored spa treatments incorporate natural elements from the islands, and each of our fully accredited wellness specialists is also a licensed massage therapist.

The Art of Expedition Travel

Our ships tell the stories of Galápagos from a different angle—through the eyes of artists who find inspiration in these storied isles. Cabins are styled with traditional crafts and woven textiles created by regionally based artisans, and Global Gallery shops are stocked with locally made products to help create a renewable cycle of support for area communities. Adorning the walls of each vessel, you will find artwork and photography depicting the archipelago's enchanting creatures and landscapes.

Kayakers set out from the National Geographic Endeavour II for a paddle through Galápagos waters; our nimble Zodiacs allow for up-close exploration of the archipelago's hidden coves and rocky shorelines on-board treatment rooms offer spa services with a view; a guest is offered champagne; fresh, locally sourced ceviche.

Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic purchases more than 30 tons of local organic produce annually—an initiative that supports family farms throughout the archipelago.

Magdalena Paredes, grower of edible flowers sold to Lindblad Expeditions, Santa Rosa, Galápagos.

From Farm to Galley in the Galápagos

Lindblad Expeditions has cultivated a sustainable farm-to-table dining program in the Galápagos designed with a key mission in mind: to support the livelihoods of Galápagos farmers. The first of its kind among expedition cruise lines in the archipelago, the program gives a boost to the local economy—and a fresh taste of the archipelago to travelers.

Any given day on a Galápagos expedition is likely to bring a host of new experiences—and for many travelers, the first moments of discovery happen over breakfast. Local dishes like bolon de verde, a meat-and-cheese dumpling wrapped in mashed plantains, are served alongside fresh papaya and tamarillo and cups of Galápagos-grown coffee. With every meal aboard, guests are getting a literal taste of their surroundings.

To serve guests aboard National Geographic Endeavour II and National Geographic Islander II, Lindblad Expeditions must acquire between 30 and 40 tons of local and organic produce annually, an undertaking that relies on as many as 40 Galápagos farmers.

Using locally sourced ingredients comes with a host of benefits for the archipelago's delicate ecosystems: it lowers the risk of importing invasive species, cuts down the company's carbon footprint, and greatly reduces packaging waste.

The impact on local families is also significant. Clemente, who grows everything from lettuce to leeks, reflects, "Before Lindblad Expeditions, there was no sign of any tourist wanting my products—it was all for the locals. Lindblad has opened up so many possibilities for me and my family and our future."

Eating local seco (a stewed meat dish) or ceviche fresh from the surrounding sea also helps guests forge a natural connection to the local culture, which Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Vice President of Hotel Operations Ana Esteves reinforces when visiting the islands. "Each time we are in the region, we try to bring our farmers on board the ship, so they can see what we are doing. For us, it is beyond rewarding to create and deliver these experiences in a way that so closely align with our mission. This is as local as it gets."

Conservation In Action

The Revival of a Species

During our decades exploring Galápagos, our travelers have made a significant impact on local conservation and sustainability efforts, in part through contributions to the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Fund. One such initiative is the local captive breeding program run by the Galápagos National Park Directorate on Santa Cruz Island. This is the remarkable story of an iconic species that was saved by nurturing Super Diego—one truly exceptional giant tortoise.

Saving a Keystone Species

As the sole megaherbivores in the Galápagos, giant tortoises play a significant role in shaping vegetation throughout the archipelago, scattering a variety of seeds—packaged in fresh fertilizer—across island habitats. A critical keystone species, if the giant tortoise disappeared, the interdependent ecosystems of the Galápagos would soon follow.

This was nearly their fate, after 18th-century buccaneers and whalers plundered an estimated 200,000 tortoises for fresh meat at sea. Early settlers dealt two more destructive blows in the forms of habitat loss and invasive species. When conservation efforts began in the 1960s, only a few thousand giant tortoises remained, including just two males and 12 females of Chelonoidis hoodensis ancestry. They were brought to the Charles Darwin Research Station as a hopeful breeding colony, and researchers began searching zoos around the world for DNA matches.

The Making of a ‘Conservation Hero’

In 1977, they found their tortoise: a male at the San Diego Zoo, hence the name Diego. He became an extremely active contributor—where the “Super” comes in—ultimately fathering some 900 offspring, or about 40 percent of the repopulation efforts. Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Galápagos Field Manager and Expedition Leader

Emma Ridley, who has worked in the Galápagos since 1995, reflected on her encounters with Diego: “Most of the time, you could see him either chasing a female or actually catch him in the act.”

Over five decades, the colony helped to repatriate 2,000 tortoise toddlers to Española Island and reached a state of natural recruitment, meaning enough native-born tortoises made it to reproductive age to sustain the species. In 2020, it was time for Super Diego to join his plentiful progeny. With the research station shut down due to the COVID-19 pandemic, it was an unceremonious journey home. Ridley and her team didn’t even get a chance to say, “adios.”

“We felt a bit bereft,” she says, “and were left to wonder how he would like the wild after spending so long in captivity.”

“We were all a bit teary-eyed on board, all the naturalists looking at the screen,” Ridley recalls. “We got some closure seeing him back in his real habitat... after over a hundred years away from home.”

A Well-Earned Retirement

Nearly two years later, in February 2022, they got their answer when the Good Morning America crew joined a voyage aboard National Geographic Endeavour II as part of their “Extraordinary Earth” series. Equipped with a special drone permit and tracking coordinates provided by the Galápagos Conservancy, the ship sailed to Española Island in search of Diego. After five hours, he was spied sleeping peacefully beneath a prickly pear tree, looking just as he had back at the research station. “We were all a bit teary-eyed on board, all the naturalists looking at the screen,” Ridley recalls. “We got some closure seeing him back in his real habitat... after over a hundred years away from home.”

Capturing Galápagos Five Photography Tips to Try on Your Expedition

On a Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Galápagos voyage, photographing the archipelago's iconic landscapes and wildlife is never an afterthought—it's central to the expedition experience. Every departure is accompanied by a certified photo instructor (CPI), who helps guests capture incredible images of their travels. Raised in the archipelago, Socrates Tomala is a CPI and naturalist who recently sat down with us to share his tips for telling the story of your Galápagos voyage through photography.

Work With the Environment

Animals are unpredictable photography subjects—a Galápagos sea lion you're framing might decide to lay right in the middle of a trail. By using portrait mode on an iPhone, you can blur out the background and focus on the subject in the foreground. It's also important to isolate colors so you're not shooting a dark brown sea lion against black lava rock. Instead, keep moving around until you find an angle that will make your subject pop.

Wait for Fish to Swim to You

Many of the fish species in Galápagos travel in big schools, but if you swim toward them, they will scatter. When you encounter a school of fish, determine its pattern of motion. Try to anticipate their actions, then position yourself in their path and wait for them to swim to you.

Be Ready for Sunsets

At golden hour near the Equator, the best light comes and goes in the blink of an eye. Be ready with the right shutter speed, aperture, and exposure settings. If you're not sure what settings to use, don't worry—your CPI will be there on board to help you set up.

Seek Out Shady Waters

Here's another thing to keep in mind when taking photos underwater: don't shoot in direct sunlight where rays hit the water. This creates an effect we call backscatter and causes the frame to fill up with shiny particles. Instead, go in between the light and the dark, to a place that has soft shadows.

Don't Forget About People

It's important to photograph people—not just animals—since people are part of your voyage's story. Rather than taking a posed snapshot of people waving and looking directly at you, try to tell a story. I encourage guests to get active shots of walking, kayaking, or paddleboarding, where subjects are in the moment and not looking into the camera.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY: Join National Geographic Photography Expert Rich Reid (September 8, 2023) or experts David Doublet and Jennifer Hayes (December 8, 2023) on a special photography departure of our Galápagos aboard National Geographic Endeavour II expedition, which features an optional pre-voyage extension to the Ecuadorian Amazon. Departures are also available in 2024. Learn more at expeditions.com/yasuni

Nurture their Passion for Exploration

One of the most rewarding sights on expedition is witnessing the gleam of discovery in a child's eyes, whether they're walking alongside a grazing giant tortoise or watching blue-footed boobies perform an elaborate courtship dance. Moments like these are abundant in the Galápagos—and they're especially meaningful when complemented with the learning opportunities offered through our exclusive National Geographic Global Explorers program.

Developed in conjunction with National Geographic Education, this hands-on, interactive program teaches kids and teens 18 and under how to explore like scientists and tell the stories of the archipelago's legendary wildlife. Your global explorers are led by certified field educators who are experts at using the Galápagos as a natural classroom.

Kids will hone their observation skills and learn to capture and share their experiences through photographs, videos, drawings, and more. With a range of activities to choose from, such as snorkeling with sea lions, examining plankton under the ship microscope, or earning a Zodiac driver's 'license,' this flexible program encourages young travelers to explore their own interests, whether it's marine biology, geology, or photography.

GUEST IMPRESSIONS

Noah and Kiran Thomas

I really enjoyed the National Geographic Global Explorers program which gave all the kids on board super cool things like hats, colored pencils, and notebooks that had checklists for nature. I saw 78 different species of mammals, reptiles, fish, plants, and invertebrates! At the end a naturalist grades your Field Notebook and you get a prize.

I recommend this vacation to everyone! - Noah, Age 10

My favorite experience in the Galápagos was snorkeling. The sea lions were so friendly they swam right next to me! On the ship, the service for food is great. They remember the drinks you like, and you get ice cream for dessert. I had a blast! - Kiran, Age 8

EXCLUSIVE SAVINGS: On select 2023 departures of Galápagos aboard National Geographic Endeavour II, families can bring one kid for 50% off and a second kid free.

SELF-DISINFECTING SHIPS: Lindblad Expeditions became the first self-disinfecting fleet with the rollout of the ACT CleanCoat™ system in 2019. This photocatalytic cleaning process activates when illuminated, continuously breaking down unwanted microbes such as bacteria, viruses, mold, and airborne allergens. The positive environmental impacts of this non-toxic, chemical-free system are many: less plastic in the supply chain and waste stream, and more than one million gallons of water saved annually. The system lowers our carbon footprint and creates a cleaner, healthier shipboard environment for guests and crew alike.
